

CONFIDENCE
IN EVERY CASE.

The pleasantly bitter notes of pummelo balance the grassy asparagus and peppery arugula in this healthy salad.

Specialty PRODUCE REPORT

EARLY NOVEMBER 2017

Featured Items

Celery Roots – Brown, knobby celery roots may look rough, but their flavor is a delicate mix of green celery and parsley. Size ranges between that of an orange and a grapefruit. Discard inedible leaves and peel the thick skin to reveal luminous, crunchy white flesh. Soak raw sticks in lemon water to prevent discoloration, then add to gratins, green salads, and sandwiches or boil and mash like potatoes. Available year-round in 11-pound packs.

Crab Apples – Crab apples are small, hard-fleshed ornamental apples with yellow skins tinged with red blush. Far too tart to be eaten out of hand, crab apples must be cooked. They make great garnishes and work well in jam and marmalade recipes. Braise with game and pork or stew in cider and mulled wine. Available through fall in 10-pound cartons.

Pummelos – Pummelos are large, round, citrus fruits with thick yellow skins. Their flesh is light pink and milder/sweeter than that of their grapefruit cousins. Chefs like to use them in green salads, spicy curries, and seafood dishes. Their soft citrus flavor pairs well with avocados, chile peppers, and peppery greens. In season through December, pummelos are shipped in 6-, 8-, 10-, and 14-count boxes.
