Featured Items

Fingerling Potatoes – Fingerlings are small, narrow, creamy-fleshed potatoes; their skins are yellow, but they can also be blue, red—even purple. Fingerlings can be boiled and tossed in green or potato salads, roasted with meats, and used as a base for elegant appetizers (think crème fraîche and caviar). In stock year-round, they are shipped in 10-, 20-, and 50-pound packs.

Jackfruits – Jackfruits have spikey, leathery skins that protect smaller, inner yellow lobes and can weigh as much as 80 pounds! They can be used when ripe (juicy and sweet) or unripe (starchy, potato-like texture) and make excellent meat substitutes—especially in barbecue dishes and curries. Available year-round, they are usually packed in 40-pound cartons.

Lychees – Lychees have thin, greenish- to reddish-brown leathery shells. Peel to reveal gelatinous, translucent flesh that surrounds a large pit. Lychees' flavor is akin to very sweet, flowery grapes, making them ideal for fruit salads and tropical beverages. Supplies are typically available through September in 10- and 13-pound boxes.
