HIGHLIGHTS

ORANGES

The California Navel orange crop is dominated by large-sized fruit; small supplies (88-, 113-, and 138-count oranges) are becoming extremely limited. Size and grade substitutions will soon be requested to fill orders; varieties from Florida and Mexico can be substituted as well as California Cara Cara oranges.

STRAWBERRIES

Although the weather has improved in Florida and Central Mexico in time for increased Valentine's Day demand, California's Santa Maria and Oxnard growing regions are expecting rain this week. Expect elevated prices.

BLUEBERRIES

Supplies are becoming extremely limited. The import season will end the week of Feb 22, shifting all demand to Mexico, where volume is falling. Florida's freezing temperatures will prolong this shortage until April.

ONIONS

- Red and yellow markets are easing.
- The Mexican onion season is underway (crossing into Texas). The domestic Texas season will begin in early March.

GREEN ONIONS

- Green onion prices are elevated.
- Expect low volume through February/early March.

CALIFORNIA LEMONS

- Quality is excellent; size is dominated by 95- to 165-count supplies.
- Expect a slow price climb as demand increases over the next six to eight weeks.

Q

Fresh juices like RSS Orange, Lemon, and Lime can brighten flavors in a variety of beverages. How do you suggest operators use them in cocktails, mocktails, and low-alcohol drinks?

A

Fresh-pressed juice is like liquid sunshine—bartenders and chefs should treat it as a fast track to brightness.

Orange juice is perfect in spritzes and shandy-style cocktails, especially with winter spices like star anise. For mocktails, fresh juice is the hero. Build a non-alc margarita with lime + orange + agave + a pinch of salt that tastes adult without the booze. In low-alcohol drinks, think sessionable: vermouth + fresh lemon, or a citrus spritz with bitter aperitivo and a splash of soda. The key is: fresh juice adds brightness without leaning on sugar, so every beverage tastes tighter, cleaner, and more intentional.
